A Five days FDP Program was organised at "Shriram Group of Colleges" recently. It was a transformative journey for educators. The program focused on 'New Approaches and Methods for writing papers and granting 'Intellectual Property Rights.' Esteemed faculty members and industry experts gathered to exchange insights on innovative research methods and intellectual property protection. The event fostered academic growth and equipped educators with the tools needed to thrive in an evolving educational landscape. From engaging sessions to interactive discussions, the program provided a comprehensive learning experience. As we continue to prioritize excellence, this initiative sets a new benchmark in faculty development.

'In learning you will teach and in teaching you will learn.'

The Supremacy of Social Media: A Portrait

"A lot of people who are 'social media' stars aren't considered to be 'real' stars. People underestimate the amount of work it takes to edit and upload a video every single day and document your life like that."

- Shawn Mendes, a canadian singer and song writer

We don't remember a time when social media didn't exist. For some of us social media has changed the world. It's no longer just a nice to have, it's a must have. Social media has become a cornerstone of modern life, fundamentally changing how we connect and share information. Platforms like Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, and Tik Tok keep us in touch with friends and family, let us explore new interests, and help us support important causes. Movements such as 'MeToo' and 'Black Lives Matter' high point how these platforms can amplify voices and drive significant social change.

Digital influencers have also transformed the marketing world. They build a connect with audience more peculiarly and appealingly, shaping drifts and persuading buying decisions. Yet, this concealing of lines between personal endorsements and marketing can make it complex to distinguish genuine content from paid promotions.

However, social media has its downsides. Privacy apprehensions are a major issue, as many users are unaware of how their personal data is collected and used. Additionally, heavy use of social media can negatively impact mental health, contributing to feelings of anxiety and inadequacy. The blowout of misinformation is another concern, as false information can quickly gain traction and affect public opinion. To make the utmost of social media while circumventing its pitfalls, here are some tips:

Know Your Settings: Regularly check your privacy settings to control what information you share.

Be Mindful: Pay attention to how social media affects your mood and take breaks if needed.

Check Facts: Verify the credibility of information before sharing it.

Stay Positive: Use social media to build connections and support causes that matter to you.

By balancing engagement with awareness, we can enjoy the benefits of social media while managing its risks effectively. Stay connected and stay thoughtful!

"Social media is not just an activity; it is an investment of valuable time and resources. Surround yourself with people who do not just support you and stay with you but inform your thinking about ways to WOW your online presence."

Prof. Vikas Basant

Head: Social Media Management, SRGOC

Dear Readers

The tongue practically weighs nothing, but.....

Precisely quoted: 'The tongue practically weighs nothing but it is very difficult hold it.' words have the power to build people up or to put them down. They can uplift and enlighten, or depress and destroy My parents often quoted: "When gentle words are available, why to use harsh words". And we were brought up under their guidance and discipline.

'Anger is one less than danger'. Try and think of a time when this line fell true in your life. Often out of annoyance, apprehensions words spurt out with a uninterrupted speed. Just control them. 'Look before you leap and think before you speak.'

Sometimes, we use words as missiles in moments of antagonism but more often, people use it deliberately to hurt or harm other people. The toxicity which we see around us in workplaces, and in personal and professional lives, in official doms, in society gives a really gloomy depiction of how times have changed. Children today are seen disrespecting their parents, mentors and relatives trying to break each barricade for doing what they like. The connect is lost, the love and respect is misplaced. Media has really become smarter and humans are sufferers of the same. Impact of social media has added to the world of delinquency. Activities like congregations at relatives, and communal jamboree seem to be a dream world now. Not only this – respect for elderly, grey haired at the work place is lost in the smoke. They are taken to be white elephants, not knowing

“As a white candle in a holy place; So is the beauty of an aged face” Joseph Campbell

Like waving a magic wand, words have the supremacy to shape our authenticity. They can stimulate, motivate, ease, and rebuild. They can build networks and associations as well as abolish them. Of course, actions speak louder than words, and supporting our words with compatible activities is important.

We need to accept the fact that if words are powerful enough to reconcile, they can bridge the gap between heaven and earth, they can bring back lost hopes, broken connections and teamwork in an organization. They have the power to wound, to cause agony, even to slaughter. We live in a culture that values freedom of speech, and so we are allowed to say almost anything, even horrible, hateful things. She was not only brimming with positiveness but was basking in the glory of her new found success. Words can heal, bring love, comfort, and happiness, or save someone's lives. My neighbor's story is a perfect example of this...

Remember 'An injury on the tongue heals the quickest, but an injury caused by a tongue takes the longest time to restore.'
